Vol. 22

Chinook, Alberta. Thursday, January 11th 1945

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE CHINOOK LOCAL OF THE U. F. A. WAS HELD

The annual meeting of the Chinook Local of the U. F. A. was held in the Chinook Hotel on Thursday, Jan. 4th. About twenty members sat down to dinner on the invitation of the Local Branch. After the repast, the secretary, Lorne Proudfoot presented his report for the past year. R. J. Marr, president of the Local, being chairman, the secretary stated the membership to be about 50, with the finances in good shape. The meeting discussed the store, Coal, oil and other business in connection with the Local, and by a motion the report was accepted.

Mr. Vic Lawrence was elected President, and L. Proudfoot Secretary for the coming year. L. Proudfoot was appointed delegate to the Annual Convention, in Edmonton, with S. W. Warren substitute after which the meeting adjourned.

Mr. McColl, Superintendent of the U. F. A. Co-op Stores was in Chinook on Friday of last week installing the new Manager, Mr. Stollery, and looking after affairs connected with the Local Store, he also attended a meeting of the Local Advisory Board, and gave a report on financial and other business in connection with store, and also taking care of decorating and improvements the store still showed a profit for the year, which the Local Board considered very good.

Hybrid Corn

According to the Bureau of Agricultural Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture, the percentage of total corn acreage in the United States devoted to hybrid corn increased from 11 in 1922 to 51.6 in 1932. In the North Central states, where about 70 per cent of the corn crop is produced, the acreage of hybrid corn increased from 62 per cent in 1922 to 77 per cent in 1932.

Obviously, therefore, the farmers like hybrid corn, and the chief reason is that it yields about 20 per cent more than open pollinated varieties. Let us see what this has meant to food production and to the farmers in the North Central states. In 1932 the production was about 2.4 billion bushels. Some 720 per cent of the acreage was accounted for by hybrid corn, at least 1.75 billion bushels were hybrid. If we accept the estimated superiority of hybrid corn; namely, 20 per cent, then one-fifth of 1.75 billion bushels, or 352 million bushels produced in 1932 in the North Central states can be credited to the corn breeder. This contribution to war food production, not to mention material benefits to farmers, is nothing less than astounding. It will interest our readers to know that Dr. H. F. Tracy, University of Minnesota, who was chief researcher for Thatcher wheat, has played a prominent part in the hybrid corn breeding work. Agricultural scientists cannot "make bricks without straw." If we are wise we shall see that agricultural research is expanded immediately after the war, and that salary scales are adjusted so as to attract the best men available.

Plo. Officer J. C. Charyk, former Chinook School principal, who is home on leave is spending two days this week, visiting with his friends here.

Mr. and Mrs. Stollery and family of Calgary, moved to Chinook last week. Mr. Stollery has been appointed manager of the U. F. A. Co-op Store.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson and son, Hugh who have spent a few weeks at Turner Valley, returned this week.

There has not been much snow in this district up to the present time, although, the ground is covered. Following a real cold snap the weather quite mild r this week.

The Ladies Card Club met Wednesday evening at the Hotel, with Mrs. Sutherland as hostess. Honors were shared by Mrs. W. Gingles and Mrs. W. Wilson.

OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY—

Human Interest Story

By MARGOT S. BEAL

McClure Newspaper Syndicate

Chief of Police John E. Carter grumbled. There were five telephones on his desk and right now they were all ringing loudly. They had been ringing all day. "Answer them, someone!" roared the chief. "Tell 'em yes, we're going to do something about it. Tell 'em no, we're not going to low away any more illegally parked cars!"

"You see what I'm up against, Bill?" he said to young Police Sergeant Moreland. "Look at these letters, all complaining because we're towing cars from places where they had no business to be parked in the first place. Why, they're after my job, Bill!"

Bill Moreland nodded wearily. "Yes, I know. They complain of slow traffic and too many accidents downtown, and then when we try to do something about it, they yell their heads off."

"I was afraid there'd be trouble when you started the campaign," continued Carter. "But I never expected anything like this. Now the Downtown Merchants' Association is kicking because we're ruining their business, and the newspapers are backing them up. They're demanding a few resignations from the force, and it looks as if..."

The chief's voice dwindled away.

"Sure, someone's got to go, and since it was my idea, I'm the logical candidate," Moreland grinned half-heartedly. It didn't matter now. Sally was going home, and she wasn't coming back. "Just for a visit, Bill," she had said, avoiding his eyes. But he knew that visit would stretch out indefinitely.

The trouble had started right after the baby died. Poor little Sally had been heartbroken, and Bill... well, even now he couldn't walk past a shop full of babies' things without that dull ache in his heart. But he had tried to be cheerful, for Sally's sake, and she had thought he was heartless and unfeeling. Now she'd go away, and Bill was asked to resign from the force.

He squared his shoulders. "O.K. Chief," he said. "I'll write a letter of resignation that will look swell on the front pages of the papers."

As Bill handed his letter to the chief and turned to go the door opened, and Bill collided with officer Rex Ashton, on whose face was a cat-in-the-cream expression.

"Ashton said unceremoniously. 'We've got a baby cut here. What shall we do with it?' 'You've got what?' 'A baby. You know... da... da...'"

"Well, get it out of here. What do you think this is, a day nursery?"

They turned to Bill Moreland. "Say, you're in on this, too?" But Bill wasn't listening. He was staring into the outer office at Sally—a wide-eyed Sally clutching a baby in her arms.

"Sally! For heaven's sake, where did you get that?"

"Hey, Chief," Ashton said unceremoniously. "We've got a baby cut here. What shall we do with it?"

"You've got what?"

"A baby. You know... da... da..."

"Hey, Chief," Ashton said unceremoniously. "We've got a baby cut here. What shall we do with it?"

"You've got what?"

"A baby. You know... da... da..."

"Well, I stopped at the telegraph office to wire mother I was coming, and when I came out my car was gone. These officers told me it had been towed away because I was double parked, and that I'd have to pay the charges at the car lot before I could get it." She glared at the embarrassed policemen.

"Go on," Bill said patiently.

"They took me to the lot and we found a baby in a basket on the floor of my car."

Bill's suffering glance met his chief's eye. This was the last straw. Now the force would be charged with kidnapping because a mother rattled a baby home and left her baby in the wrong car.

Police Chief Carter said heavily. "Well, some woman just put the kid in the wrong car. We'll broadcast an alarm to find the mother!"

"Oh, no, you won't!" Sally cried indignantly. "Read this." She thrust a note into Carter's hands. He read it, then groaned.

"An abandoned baby. That's a fine mess. What'll we do now?"

Sally stopped cooing at the baby. "Oh, we'll keep the baby, of course, Bill and I. The poor mother can't afford to give it a home, so we're going to. Can't we, Bill? Please?"

Something stirred in Bill's heart. That look in Sally's eyes... "Sure, honey, we'll keep him if you want to," he said gently.

"Oh, Bill!" Sally was in his arms, a trifle awkwardly because of the baby, but she was where she belonged. Over her head Bill's eyes met those of his chief and, pointing to the letter of resignation, he shook his head warningly. Sally must not know yet.

When they had gone, Chief Carter sat down at his desk, a speculative look in his eyes. Then he grinned broadly and reached for a telephone. There was a human interest angle to this car towing business that the newspapers had to know about. At the same time, of course, he'd release Bill Moreland's resignation for publication.

The next morning the five telephones on Chief Carter's desk were ringing loudly. "Answer them, someone!" roared the chief. "Tell 'em yes, we're going to do something about it. Tell 'em no, we're not going to accept his resignation!"

The chief chuckled. The morning papers carrying the story of the abandoned baby and one on Bill Moreland's resignation had been on the streets only two hours. But already one-third of the town's female population had been on the wire leading to police headquarters.

"After all," the chief said, "fifteen hundred mothers can't be wrong. They want to be sure that baby has a good home, and he can't have one unless his new father has a job."

War Casualties

Says Loss Of Life In This War Will Be Greater Than All The Wars Fought In Last 825 Years

Dr. Lee Owens, head of the Oklahoma City University History Department, predicts that nine European countries will suffer more casualties in the second great war than they have in all the other wars they have fought in the last 825 years combined.

Dr. Owens has just completed a study of war casualties for Britain, France, Germany, Italy, Austria, Poland, Lithuania, Denmark and Spain for the period between 1101 and 1925.

His figures show that during that period the total army strength of these countries was 171,607,600 men and there were 35,415,485 casualties. This does not include those who died from epidemics or other causes indirectly associated with war.

(Dr. Owens did not include Russia, he says, because he considers it an Asiatic nation, which was not engaged in any war for the period comparatively late in its history. However, his figures cover European sections of Russia which formerly were parts of some of the nine countries he listed.)

"Naturally," he says, "there is no way to tell how many casualties have been suffered by these nine countries so far in this war. But conservative estimates, coupled with predictions of casualties in future battles, will bring the figure close to 40,000,000."

In an interview, Dr. Owens said his comparison of fighting men and casualties for the medieval and modern periods showed that during the 12th century only slightly less than three per cent of the men engaged were casualties while for the first 25 years of this century casualties numbered more than 35 per cent.

"If man continues to invent and use these iniquitous, diabolical machines for wars, another conflict will carry these figures out of sight," Dr. Owens asserted.

On The Burma Front

There Appears To Be A Lot Of Monkey Business Going On

A most magnificent yarn from Bombay announces what is described with almost studied moderation as "the newest secret weapon on the Burma front—a sort of O.C.T.T.U. for apes. In Central Burma, according to this story, the Japanese have established a regular military school for the training of army monkeys, where they enter the same way as cadets and come out as trained fighters. Their particular job is to climb trees and throw hand grenades, but in order to supplement what is claimed to be "Japan's dwindling manpower," the monkeys are also "trained to ride mules and give the impression of men on horseback." Nothing is said about teaching them to shout "Banzai!" and wear hand-drummed spectacles; perhaps it is thought that the resemblance to authentic Japanese is already sufficiently close to make such touches of additional camouflage unnecessary.

It is a wonderful story; in goes the yarn and out comes the warrior of Nippon and loyal servant of the Mikado 1944 model. Somebody does consider resurrect Tojo and send him off to tell the Great Shrimas about this latest development in co-operation for the higher mammals. It seems about the highest light in proposed war efforts since somebody suggested to the War Inventions Board in the last war that we should train cormorants to pick the mortar cut of factory buildings in the Ruhr and so bring the German armament industry down in ruins.—Manchester Guardian.

German Workers

Allies Will Dissolve The Nazi-Controlled Labor Front

The Allied military government in Germany will dissolve the Nazi-controlled Labor Front but German workers will be permitted to form democratic trade unions, a proclamation issued in the name of General Dwight D. Eisenhower told the German people.

The proclamation, 12th in a series explaining AMG plans in Germany, was broadcast to Germany and reported by the Associated Press.

"All forms of free economic association and combination among workers will be permitted, provided they do not assume any political or militaristic complexion," the proclamation said.

Collective bargaining with employers will be permitted but strikes "threatening security" and lockouts will be prohibited it said.

The proclamation said civilian labor requirements of Allied military forces will be given the first priority but democratic workers will be given retention of key employees in public services, utilities and essential industries.

Says United States Very Happy To Have British Naval Assistance

In Pacific

Rep. Lyndon B. Johnson, D., Tex., speaking for a house naval affairs committee delegation, denied that the United States resented British naval assistance in the Pacific and said his committee was "very happy to have such a wonderful ally in the big task ahead."

"We are very impressed by the co-operation we have been getting from Australia," Johnson said on the delegation's arrival after visiting American advance installations in the Pacific. "Any criticism by our isolationist press isn't representative of American public opinion. There are few if any isolationists among the American people today."

Retention Of Tax Is A Burden To Business

With regard to the excess profits tax, there is wide agreement that this impost should be removed at the earliest possible opportunity. It is a burden which absolutely precludes expansion and progress in most businesses; Canada will not see the development and growth of business and industry necessary to full employment until this tax is dropped. Nor will its removal entail any great loss to Government revenue, for it provides less than two per cent. of the present total. It is obviously uneconomic to retain a tax which throttles business and industry while producing a very minor percentage of revenue.—Kingston Whig-Standard.

DON'T CONFUSE THE SIGNALS

War came. The manufacture of most civilian goods had to be cut down or stopped to make way for war production. That caused shortages of civilian goods—that was the RED LIGHT

don't jump the YELLOW light

Some restrictions are now being lifted, but it does not mean lots of goods right away. War's demands are still huge and must come first.
 We can't neglect them just so that some of us here at home can get a little more.

Don't confuse the signals—(This is the YELLOW LIGHT ONLY).

It means a little more of some things and it helps business men get ready for the time when there will be more materials and workers available.

It does not mean the end of shortages!

Getting back to peacetime production will necessarily be piecemeal and gradual.

"Patience" is the word.

it's NOT the green light yet

Only after Victory over both enemies can the Green Light be switched on, and the road cleared for enough production to meet all our civilian needs.

TIME BOMBS

People are like elevators. We lift or lower others to the level we are on.

War, like clarity, begins at home. And must end there if we want peace to last.

Nothing ruins the truth like stretching it.

Too many judge right from wrong on the basis of which pays best.

Our heads can only make excuses for what's lacking in our hearts.

We need expanding friendships in this contrasting world

No man can be sure of himself until he's su-of something much bigger than himself.
